Synaptic localization of RhoA, ROCK and MLCK in CA1 hippocampal neurons: implications for the development of extracellular matrix components during neuritogenesis. The molecular mechanisms underlying actin remodeling during neuritogenesis were investigated in CA1 hippocampal neurons. Using confocal microscopy, we analyzed the distribution of Rho GTPases, their effector Rho-associated coiled coil-containing protein kinase (ROCK) and myosin light chain kinase (MLCK) during development of neuronal processes. We found that RhoA is concentrated at the tip of newly developing neurites. Rock2 and Mlc2 were mainly localized in the proximal and distal portions of the neurites. Localization of the Rho GTPases and their effector proteins occurs during the early stages of development of neural processes and is mainly related to neurite outgrowth and guidance.

Q: How to make a background that goes through an entire canvas I have a background with a gradient but I want to adjust it so that it goes from top to bottom rather than the bottom to top. I have tried using the below code but instead of going from top to bottom, it just goes from top to the bottom of the canvas. Is there a way I can change the code so that it goes from the top to the bottom? Also it's worth noting that I have removed some of the code because it's irrelevant to the issue. HTML CSS body { background: #15181b; } canvas { border: 1px solid #ffffff; background: #1d212a; } A: In your CSS you have set the background: body { background: #15181b; } This background extends from your root to the top. That is why you see a gradient that is from top to bottom. To make the gradient from bottom to top, you must set the background position to the bottom. body { background: #15181b; background-position: 0% 0%; /* set the `background-position` to the bottom */ }
