1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an optical system used in an optical apparatus including a projection lens system and a two-dimensional image pick-up device (e.g., image sensor) which are disposed in an optical path extending from the projection lens system to an object to be projected onto the two-dimensional image pick-up device, and to an image forming apparatus having the optical system.

2. Related Background Art In recent years, optical apparatus including a projection lens system and a two-dimensional image pick-up device (e.g., image sensor) such as a CCD or the like have been used as image processing means for processing an image picked up by the two-dimensional image pick-up device, to form a desired image. In such optical apparatus, there have been demands for miniaturization, compactness, higher resolution and higher image quality of the two-dimensional image pick-up device. As an image pick-up device having higher resolution and higher image quality, there is provided a device provided with a pixel array in which a plurality of unit pixel (photosensitive cell or light receiving cell) arrays of the same size and the same shape are disposed two-dimensionally, arranged with a great pitch. In the pixel array, pixels are highly dense and, therefore, the incident direction of the light incident to each photosensitive cell greatly fluctuates depending on pixels even if the light incident to the photosensitive cell is light of the same wavelength and the same incident position. Such a fluctuation in the incident direction of the light results in reduction of the contrast of an image. It is important for the image processing by image processing means to output a clear image without degradation of the contrast. For this purpose, the optical system is provided with an optical device having a function of correcting the contrast by disposing a phase difference plate at a predetermined position on the optical path. As the phase difference plate, a phase difference plate made of
